

19TH CENTURY TURKS

Posted on October 27, 2015 by Keghart

Category: Did You Know?

Describing 19th century Turks, famous English poet Samuel Taylor Coleridge writes: "They have no past; they are not an historical people, they exist only in the present, while J. L. Johnson ("Incidents of Travel in the Russian and Turkish Empires—1839) wrote: "The Turks are a sufficiently intelligent people, and cannot help feeling the superiority of strangers."

Describing 19th century Turks, famous English poet Samuel Taylor Coleridge writes: "They have no past; they are not an historical people, they exist only in the present, while J. L. Johnson ("Incidents of Travel in the Russian and Turkish Empires—1839) wrote: "The Turks are a sufficiently intelligent people, and cannot help feeling the superiority of strangers."

