Don Pendleton's "Mack Bolan's Double Crossfire" thriller is about a small group of Armenians fighting the Turks in the '70s. The two leading characters are American-Armenian Marko Adamian and Richard Hagen. The latter's real name is Dikran. Adamian, a rich businessman, participates in Armenian liberation efforts in the Middle East. The pocket book (Gold Eagle, 1982) includes a sympathetic view of the Armenian Cause ("Hye Tadd") and has many pages of Armenian history going back to Urartu.
