

POEMS BY TATUL-SONENTZ

Posted on July 4, 2009 by Keghart

Category: Opinions

The Call and Sour Eulogy

The Call and Sour Eulogy

THE CALL

To Neda

On a summer day
in this ancient land
where a pagan sun
once reigned supreme in a merciless encounter between hope and fear
in the eternal sphere
of re-creation –
on the streets of a city torn between what was
and what is to be – between Adam
and Eve – on the eve of a new dawn you ventured forth with childlike candor holding the hand
of destiny...

You wondered for whom the shots were meant
as your chest exploded
and you fell...
your wide open young eyes
turned to the skies
to the fading light
of a silent sun
seeking an answer
to the divine thirst
for a sacrifice --
a burnt offering
on the blood soaked altar of freedom of the soul...

Your unuttered call
yet to be heard
is suddenly silenced
by a pierced heart
bleeding on the dust
of a long road paved with pain leading to the final abode of the human spirit in its quest for peace in an Eden without bars...

You are home at last nestled in a million hearts that witnessed in your demise and your frozen gaze
the surging triumph of light over darkness.

Sour Eulogy

To those with whom I broke bread
and shared my bed
now all six feet under
yet looking down
on me from up there...

Oh, God!
how I resent
the dead silence
and the mute
conceit
of the departed!

