

THEODOR AMAN

Posted on November 14, 2015 by Keghart

Category: Did You Know?

19th century Romanian painter Theodor Aman (1831-1891) was of Armenian descent. His style is considered to be a predecessor of Impressionism. He was one of the most important Romanian artists. His work blended Romanticism and Academicism. His workshop was the most popular place for high society. He helped establish the first Fine Arts School in Bucharest in 1864 where he was the first teacher and director.

19th century Romanian painter Theodor Aman (1831-1891) was of Armenian descent. His style is considered to be a predecessor of Impressionism. He was one of the most important Romanian artists. His work blended Romanticism and Academicism. His workshop was the most popular place for high society. He helped establish the first Fine Arts School in Bucharest in 1864 where he was the first teacher and director.

