

WHO SPEAKS FOR ARMENIA? (A POEM)

Posted on October 10, 2009 by Keghart

Category: Opinions

Who Speaks For Armenia?

By Alan Whitehorn

October 1 – October 9, 2009

Who Speaks For Armenia?

By Alan Whitehorn

October 1 – October 9, 2009

Who speaks for Armenia?

Is it the biggest faction or party?

Is it the most disciplined group?

Is it the loudest voices?

Is it the most patriotic?

Is the wealthiest?

Is it the most devout?

Is it the Church?

If so, which church?

Is it the government of the Republic of Armenia?

Is it specifically the President of Armenia?

Or is it the Parliament of Armenia?

Or is it ultimately the people of the Armenian Republic?

Does it involve the large and influential global Diaspora?

Does it include only the native-born, who now reside in the Diaspora?

Or does it include those of Armenian ancestry who were born overseas?

How many generations of those born in the Diaspora might it include?

Is it primarily those who are able to read and speak Armenian?

Or does it also include those who do not speak Armenian,

but who know Armenian history?

Is it the powerful oligarchs in Yerevan?

Or is it the poorest villagers in the rugged countryside?

Is it the affluent Diaspora which has donated so much aid?

Or is it those who struggle to earn enough to raise their families in Armenia?

Is it the politicians?

Is it the artists?

Is it the academics and journalists?

Is it the lawyers and lawmakers?

Is it the males who dominate so much at home and abroad?

Or is it the voices of young women seeking a better future?

Is it all the citizens of the republic?

Is it the elderly who sacrificed so much?

Is it the young who will carry the burden ahead?

Is it future generations?

Is it those who died long ago?

Is it the pre-eminent religious martyrs of another age?

Is it contemporary writers?

Is it the haunting pleas echoing from the victims of genocide,

which remind us of their shattered hopes and great fears and how painfully they died?

Is it to be found in the eternal flame at Tsitsernakaberd?

Who speaks for Armenia

and what does she seek?

I yearn to know.

